REFORMED SEMINARY

Root yourself in timeless truth to better understand today's world.

“C.S. Lewis, commenting on the faddishness of contemporary culture and thought, once remarked that ‘fashions come and go, but mostly they go.’ At Mid-America students are taught to read the Word of God in conversation with a long history of theological study and reflection upon the meaning of the gospel of God’s grace in Jesus Christ. In this way, students are equipped to address wisely and knowledgeably the challenges of the present day.”

Dr. Cornelis P. Venema, President and Professor of Doctrinal Studies

Cultivate a fresh understanding of what the church believes.

“In my classes I introduce students to the rich and varied history of the Reformed tradition. While rejecting the desperate project of trying to live in the past—that is, looking backwards and wishing we could simply do things like our Reformed fathers long ago—students are encouraged to examine the depths of Reformed theology in order to present fresh answers and present biblical solutions to the current questions which God calls us to address in our contemporary era.”

Dr. J. Mark Beach, Professor of Ministerial and Doctrinal Studies

Develop your heart for ministry by gaining practical experience.

“The Ministerial Apprenticeship Program (MAP) was one of the most valuable components of my seminary training. As a graduate who entered ordained ministry, joined the Army as an active duty chaplain, and deployed to Iraq six months after graduation, I quickly appreciated the value of the practical pastoral experience I gained through the MAP. I trust the Lord will continue to use this program to prepare many others for gospel ministry.”

Major Paul Berghaus (M.Div., 2005)
Chaplain, United States Military Academy at West Point

Partner with the church for the greatest long-term harvest.

“As a Pastor who has had the distinct honor and privilege of mentoring several Mid-America students over the years through the Ministerial Apprenticeship Program, I can assure you that the Seminary’s very close, intentional relationship with the churches is a tremendous blessing to both students and congregations as together we benefit from the gifts which God has so graciously given to us all to His eternal glory.”

Rev. Richard Kuiken, Pastor of Pompton Plains Reformed Bible Church, Pompton Plains, NJ, and Mid-America Board of Trustees President

Sow seeds of friendship that will flourish through a lifetime of ministry together.

“As a foreign student, I was so glad to have found at Mid-America, besides a high level of theological training, a friendly, caring, and encouraging community always showing God’s love to me.”

Rev. Valentin Alpuche
(M.Div., 2007)
Pastor of El Pacto de Gracia,
Chicago Heights, IL
